In the fall of 1962, an unidentified individual placed pornographic material outside a school, thus exposing two Yorkville (Manhattan, NY) area school children to explicit content. The principal of the school reported the incident to her pastor who then informed other religious leaders in the area. This seemingly small incident is what sparked a community campaign against the distribution of obscene material then dubbed “Operation Yorkville.”

Begun as an inter-faith initiative of three clergymen—Rev. Robert E. Wiltenburg, Pastor Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church, Dr. Julius G. Neumann, Rabbi Congregation Zichron Moshe, and Rev. William T. Wood, Rector of St. Ignatius Loyola—the minister, rabbi, and priest were drawn together by their mutual concern for children and their desire to shield them from the harmful effects of pornography. From the outset, they were aided in their efforts by Rev. Morton Hill, a Jesuit priest who quickly rose to the helm of the organization and served as its president for decades.

Powered only by volunteers and with limited funds, that fledgling campaign grew and grew; the organization gained national prominence, and changed its name to Morality in Media (MIM). With Father Hill and others coordinating letter writing campaigns, discussing sexual exploitation on national television and radio, holding community forums, meeting with mayors and town councils, analyzing laws and suggesting legal reforms, walking the halls of the U.S. Congress, serving on presidential commissions, and even sitting in the Cabinet Room with the U.S. President, Morality in Media became the beacon of hope and light for those concerned about the insidious trend toward normalization of sexual exploitation in American culture. The fact that Morality in Media slowed the upward trajectory of sexual exploitation in America is indisputable. This feisty little organization successfully fought the titans of sexual exploitation, and kept the fires of human dignity burning brightly.

Today their legacy continues under the auspices of the National Center on Sexual Exploitation (NCOSE). It is the spirit of the individuals who had the vision and commitment to pioneer the work we do today, that NCOSE presents its most prestigious award, “The Founders Award,” to Mr. Robert L. Cahill, Jr.

For more than two-decades Mr. Cahill has served as MIM/ NCOSE’s Board Chairman. His wisdom guided both MIM/ NCOSE through many years, helping it weather challenging times including the move of its corporate offices from New York City, NY, to Washington, DC, the reshaping of its board of directors to have national scope, broadening of the organization’s mission to encompass the full web of sexual abuse and exploitation, and the daunting task of the changing its name from Morality in Media to the National Center on Sexual Exploitation. During critical times Mr. Cahill would call the office every day—many times multiple times a day—to provide guidance. He was very engaged in the work and direction of the organization.

Of his many attributes, his humility stands out, as does his sense of decency and generosity. Though he gave generously—NCOSE would not be here today without his generosity—he never made demands. He not only gave but he used his influence to find others who shared his vision of ending sexual exploitation.

Upon reflection on Mr. Cahill’s legacy towards a world free from sexual exploitation, current NCOSE Board Chairman Ron DeHaas shared these thoughts:

Everybody at NCOSE is excited about the future! We now know that we are making a difference, that we are no longer just whittling away, but actually disabling sexual exploitation and pornography on many fronts. What better time to celebrate a leader who has aggressively, doggedly, and indefatigably pushed and pulled us uphill, from being an organization known as a worker/organizer to becoming a nationally-recognized leader in this battle! Bob Cahill is that leader. Having worked through times of testing, both financial and (more significantly) emotionally challenging, he led us to the crest of a hill, from which we now have a clear vantage point for the future.

You got us here, Mr. Cahill, and we here dedicate ourselves now to embrace the challenge of reaching the crest of the next hill!
The National Center on Sexual Exploitation presents its “Spotlight Award” to Ms. Cordelia Anderson in recognition of her life’s work illuminating the vital importance of preventing sexual abuse and exploitation.

While it is impossible to compress her four decades of work into a summary that fully encapsulates her contributions, important highlights of Cordelia’s work include her role in 1976 as an advocate for child victims at the Hennepin County Attorney’s Office. There she began one of the first child sexual abuse (CSA) prevention programs in the country and developed the Touch Continuum. In 1980, the CSA program moved to the Illusion Theater where she co-authored plays about CSA prevention, and embarked on a nationwide tour moderating the plays and training professionals. During these years she also served as a consulting therapist with survivors of prostitution and sexual abuse, and with men who perpetrated sexual abuse.

In 1992, Cordelia launched her own consultation and training business, Sensibilities, based in Minneapolis. During the ensuing years she became interested in, and trained in, restorative justice and circles to fill a gap in early intervention and prevention. In 2006, in collaboration with National Center for Missing & Exploited Children, where she served as a board member for 20 years, she launched and chaired the National Coalition to Prevent Child Sexual Abuse & Exploitation, a coalition fostering collaboration among a variety of organizations working to prevent CSA and exploitation. Cordelia has also made significant contributions to the work of organizations such as the Minnesota Coalition Against Sexual Assault, the Jacob Wetterling Resource Center, the Just Beginnings Collaborative, Big Brothers Big Sisters of America, and the Association for the Treatment of Sexual Abusers. Over the course of her more than forty-year career she conducted more than 2,500 trainings on topics covering the full web of sexual abuse and exploitation.

A native of Camp Pendleton, California, Cordelia moved to Minnesota where she graduated with a undergraduate degree from the University of Minnesota and a graduate degree from St. Mary’s University. She and her husband of 33 years, John Humleker, are the parents of two children, Sam (27) and Sadie (21).

Remarking on her contributions to the movement, her friends shared the following:

Cordelia has so many skills and she integrates them all into her work on preventing child sexual abuse and related issues—her creativity, her strategic thinking, her community organizing, leadership, networking, and so much more. I marveled at her ability to create the National Coalition to Prevent Child Sexual Abuse and Exploitation—that evolved from an advisory committee to an ongoing coalition. I watched in awe as she brought together all the different agencies and leaders in Minnesota—and made sure that the right people were in key roles and working together. I saw how she supported the work of Patty Wetterling over the years …how she encouraged ATSA and other groups to take a deeper dive into racial justice work; and so much more. And how through it all—she is such a joy to be around—how she connects people and is such an influential mentor and good, good friend to so many.

—Karen Baker, Chief Executive Officer Pennsylvania Coalition Against Rape and the National Sexual Violence Resource Center

Simply said, Cordelia Anderson is AMAZING! Over her 40+ years in this field, she has re-invented herself multiple times, taking on the most difficult topics—the ones that most of us shy away from—from pornography, to racism, to the critical policy issues in our field. Among her many accomplishments is creating the National Coalition to Prevent Child Sexual Abuse and Exploitation that is still thriving today. But to me, her biggest accomplishment is the way she continuously welcomes new people into this work and does so with sheer joy and an infectious laugh. She has helped to build a field grounded in cooperation and connection rather than competition and isolation. Cordelia deserves this award more than anyone I know. Thank you for your decades of incredible work.

—Joan Tabachnick, DSM Consulting
Laffey, Bucci & Kent is a preeminent, national law firm with offices from east coast to west coast that handles cases for crime victims, assault and abuse survivors and catastrophic injury clients all over the country. The firm’s Crime Victim Department is made up entirely of former homicide and sex crimes prosecutors that have vast experience in interviewing and working with sexual assault and exploitation survivors and understanding their needs during both the criminal process and civil litigation, as well as telling the survivor's story at the time of trial.

Laffey, Bucci & Kent regularly works with law enforcement early on to ensure that criminal and civil justice are achieved for their clients which is why many law enforcement agencies and victim advocacy groups look to Laffey, Bucci & Kent to represent victims and survivors they work with. Laffey, Bucci & Kent has represented and continues to represent survivors against religious organizations, schools, youth organizations, athletic organizations, doctors, medical practices and hospitals, mental health and rehab facilities, malls, preschools and daycares, massage businesses as well as any other organizations who is responsible for someone being abused, assaulted or exploited. Many of their cases have been chronicled in the media and firm leaders are often asked to serve as experts for media outlets as it relates to crime and sexual exploitation prevention and response. They have been featured on A&E, Good Morning America, CBS News and other media outlets.

They currently are representing children who were abused at therapeutic boarding schools ran by the Seventh Day Adventist Church, survivors of Dr. Jack Barto and Dr. William Vollmar, represented victims of Jerry Sandusky against Penn State as well as scores of clergy and lay abuse survivors against religious organizations, were involved in the prosecution and trial of Bill Cosby and their efforts in representing survivors of Judge William Bradley for child abuse led to his disbarment, removal from the bench and a written apology acknowledging he abused their clients. They regularly work with child safety organizations and are dedicated to protecting children and adults from sexual abuse and exploitation in any form.

Notably, Laffey, Bucci & Kent represents hundreds of women who have been victimized at the hands of Massage Envy workers, a popular massage chain with a number of poor policies, including forced arbitration that resulted in Massage Envy being placed on the National Center on Sexual Exploitation’s 2019 Dirty Dozen List. While Massage Envy still has significant reforms to address, thanks in large part to the work of Laffey, Bucci & Kent, this company has begun making key policy improvements, including mandating updated background screening for all massage therapists on an annual basis, providing contact information for local law enforcement after an allegation of assault is made and offering a private room for the victim to complete the call, and forming the Massage Envy Safety Advisory Council which will help develop and implement better safety standards.

This law firm is utilizing its expertise to confront institutions which facilitate, or minimize accountability for, sexual assault and harassment. Instead of being intimidated by mega-institutions, these highly rated lawyers are standing up to do the right thing and advocate for truth and justice.
Over the past years, many corporations and businesses have experienced public pressure over sexual exploitation perpetrated by their employees or independent contractors. Uber, a popular ride-sharing app, was not immune to this trend. However, while some corporations commit to covering up assaults, or silencing victims in private confidential arbitration, Uber chose a different path. Last year, after numerous reports of sexual harassment and assault by drivers, Uber committed to substantial and proactive policy changes.

Uber strengthened driver screenings by proactively committing to re-run criminal background and motor vehicle checks each year. They added a feature that allows riders to share live trip information with up to five trusted contacts, and created an emergency button to automatically connect riders with 911. Perhaps most significantly, Uber committed to no longer require the widespread practice of mandatory arbitration for individual claims of sexual assault or sexual harassment by Uber riders, drivers or employees. This is a significant step forward in accountability, and Uber itself has stated: “Whatever [survivors] decide, they will be free to tell their story wherever and however they see fit.” Survivors will now have the option to settle their claims with Uber without a confidentiality provision that prevents them from speaking about the facts of the sexual assault or sexual harassment they suffered.

Uber went even further by working with more than 80 women’s groups as advisors and committing to publishing a safety transparency report that will include data on sexual assaults and other incidents that occur on the Uber platform. With this step, Uber has become radically transparent and accountable in its efforts to promote safety and to respect survivors, and so has become a model for the corporate world to follow.

NETFLIX: Netflix has become a staple of at-home entertainment and a major producer of media normalizing sexual exploitation and objectification. Despite much highly-rated originally produced content on its platform, Netflix sinks to storytelling which portrays gratuitous nudity and graphic sex acts in shows meant for teen and young audiences. Further, Netflix portrays graphic and violent depictions of sexual assault in a number of their shows and has even produced shows normalizing sex trafficking and exploiting children. Netflix allows a loophole for children to easily get around parental control features and it regularly recommends children's content paired right next to NC17 and TV-MA content.

UNITED AIRLINES: As if limited leg room and baggage space aren't trouble enough, increasingly air travelers must contend with the sexually charged climate created by public pornography viewing and other sexual harassment and even violent behaviors. United Airlines fails to adequately train aircrews to address the problem of pornography-use on airplanes and the sexually hostile environment that this fosters. While reports of sexual harassment and even assault have increased in the airline industry, United Airlines has not prioritized policies and procedures to keep customers safe. United needs to enable its passengers to #FlyFree from sexploitation.

SPORTS ILLUSTRATED SWIMSUIT ISSUE: If there were an Olympic medal for sexual objectification, the Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Issue would take the gold. The magazine should be more aptly named the Sexploitation Issue. This magazine sends the message that women's bodies are for public consumption. These images are not about body positivity. They are about feeding male sexual entitlement, and the mega-corporation that profits off of hypersexualizing women. In the aftermath of the sexual abuse scandals that have ensnared Olympic sports, SI's flagrant sexual objectification of women—including female athletes—is clearly mainstream misogyny.

GOOGLE: Google has failed to prioritize the digital wellbeing of its users through Google Chromebooks used in schools, Google Images, and YouTube. Google Chromebooks are marketed to schools as “built from the ground up to be shared with an unlimited number of students.” Unfortunately, many schools distribute unprotected and unfiltered Chromebooks when Google could easily turn on a default setting for safer use by children. Further, in a fraction of one second, Google Images turns up countless graphic pornographic results where penetration is clearly visible for innocent search terms. YouTube, the world’s largest video-sharing platform, regularly hosts pornography and sexual violence while Google shirks responsibility by forcing users to act at content flaggers.

STEAM: #NotAGame! Steam, the online videogame distributor with over 35 million users under the age 18 has an “allow everything” policy for sexually graphic content so long as it isn’t “strictly illegal.” As soon as this new policy launched, the number of games tagged for “nudity” doubled in just four months. Sexually graphic games feature only mild warnings, and often juxtapose graphic sex scenes with violence and promote the dangerous misconception that sexually exploiting others is a harmless game.

ROKU: Roku, a leading media streaming company, provides customers with the ability to stream TV, movies, and more. Unfortunately, Roku also facilitates hardcore pornography channels through hundreds of private and hidden channels, and is often featured on pornography websites and at pornography conventions for this feature. This stands in stark contrast to the policies of other streaming device industry leaders such as Apple TV and Amazon Fire TV.

MASSAGE ENVY: #MassageToo! From Hollywood, Capitol Hill, Silicon Valley and beyond the #MeToo movement has revealed the prevalence of sexual harassment and assault in our society. But at your local massage studio too! Yes! Massage Envy has been, and is being, sued by hundreds of women for failing to take appropriate measures when a massage therapist sexually harasses or assaults a client. The biggest massage chain has hidden forced arbitration clauses in customer agreements which force women to surrender their rights. Massage Envy does not even report incidents of suspected assaults to the Massage Therapy Board, thus allowing perpetrators to continue preying on vulnerable clients.

NEVADA: Nevada has become home base for pimps and sex traffickers. As the only U.S. state in which prostitution is legal in certain counties, Nevada legally sanctions sexual exploitation. Its sexploitation industry has a predatory dependence on women with economic disadvantages, as well as childhood histories of neglect and sexual abuse. Its normalization of prostitution as work for women, has turned Nevada into a magnet for sex traffickers and prostitution tourists. As a result, the state-wide illegal sex trade, including sex trafficking, in Nevada is the largest in the country. Police found that 30% of women in so-called legal brothels in Nevada had red flags for sex trafficking. States and local communities profiting from prostitution (by tourist revenues), like pimps, are complicit in sexual exploitation. It’s time for Nevada to join the 21st century by recognizing that sexploitation is nobody’s job.

HBO: Home Box Office Inc. (HBO) is a premium cable and satellite television network with extensive cultural influence, which regularly produces original programs that incorporate graphic sex scenes and eroticized rape scenes. Examples include The Deuce, True Blood, and Game of Thrones. Previous shows such as Cathouse and Hung normalized commercial sexual exploitation. Despite hosting graphic content, parental controls on HBO are unclear and ineffective, decreasing the odds of parents even using them, and increasing the odds that children will be exposed to sexually exploitative material.

AMAZON: Amazon delivers sexual exploitation right to your doorstep. As the world’s largest online retailer, Amazon facilitates sexually exploitative products such as sex dolls (many with childlike features), eroticized child nudity photography, and books offering “how-to” instructions for sex trafficking. Further, Amazon Prime produces original movies and TV shows that insert unnecessary gratuitous nudity thus bringing softcore pornified content to mainstream entertainment. Amazon therefore sets a standard among online retailers that it’s ok to profit from sexual exploitation.

TWITTER: Twitter is a major source of breaking news, but it also hosts vast quantities of hardcore pornography and facilitates prostitution and sex trafficking. While the platform removed the ability to search for these terms directly in video or picture tabs, there are still countless pornographic accounts which often serve as advertisements for pornography websites or online prostitution. When Tumblr announced they would no longer allow pornographic content, thousands of users flocked to Twitter attracted by Twitter’s loose policy.

EBSCO: EBSCO Information Services offers online library resources to public and private schools (K-12), public libraries, and more. In its advertising, it promises “curriculum-appropriate content.” While EBSCO has made significant improvements to elementary and middle school databases, high school databases still contain sexually graphic, non-academic, materials. This includes graphic sex act instructions and some live links to pornographic websites.

Mary Margaret Bawden received a BA in modern dance from UCRiverside, a MA in worship (emphasis in dance) from Hope International University in Fullerton, CA, and a California secondary teaching credential. She released a book in 2016 on faith-based dance, titled “Dance is Prayer in Motion: Soul to Sole Choreography for Christian Dance Ministry,” and has led a dance ministry at her church for over 20 years. Recently, Mary has noticed that the culture around children’s dance has moved towards an unhealthy trend – the sexualization of children under 12 in dance choreography, costumes, and music. That focus translates into a desire to advocate for healthy, age-appropriate guidelines to protect children and to create materials for informed adults who care about protecting children in the current culture. That has led her to found DA:NCE(Dance Awareness: No Child Exploited) alongside Soul to Sole Choreography.

Mary has spoken at the 2018 CDEA (California Dance Educator’s Organization) and 2018 CAHPERD (California Health Physical Education Recreation and Dance) Conferences, as well as the National Center on Sexual Exploitation Conference in 2016. In addition to dance venues, she welcomes invitations to speak on the DA:NCE topic from other organizations that are concerned about protecting children from sexual exploitation.

Rebekah Charleston’s story is one that is unfortunately too common. At the age of 17, after running away from home, she found herself trapped in the world of human trafficking, as a victim. After ten years and no way to escape from multiple traffickers on her own, it was the federal authorities that ultimately provided her a path to freedom and safety. Given a new lease on life, she hasn’t shied away from her experiences. Instead she has used those experiences as a source of inspiration and a way to educate others on the prevalent world of human trafficking in America. Through her work as a consultant with the National Justice Training Center and Executive Director of Valiant Hearts, Rebekah has dedicated her life to preventing others from having to experience what she did. In the years that have passed, Rebekah has won numerous awards for her work, including 2016’s Survivor Leader Award; been featured by numerous news outlets, such as Deadline Crimes and TEDx; received a master’s degree in criminal justice; and given birth to her loving son. Rebekah Charleston has a story to tell — a story of desperation, a story of hope, a story of triumph, and a story of survival.

The Virtual Cage: How the Internet Teaches Us to Exploit Ourselves

Ross Douthat joined The New York Times as an Op-Ed columnist in April 2009. His column appears every Wednesday and Sunday. Previously, he was a senior editor at The Atlantic and a blogger for theatlantic.com.

Jerome Elam is President and CEO of Trafficking in America Task Force. Raised in a broken home by an alcoholic parent, he is a survivor of child abuse/domestic violence, child sex trafficking, and child pornography. Mr. Elam is a fierce Advocate for all children deprived of their voice. He is a public speaker, a staff writer, and known columnist for Communities Digital News. Recently featured as one of New York’s New Abolitionists, he remains dedicated to the protection and empowerment of trafficked people. Staying true to values he learned in the Marine Corps, continues to provide a safe harbor for all, regardless of age, race, gender, sexual identity, or immigration status. Jerome has received the Award for Courage presented by the National Council of Jewish Women for his work in the advocacy arena and been deputized by the Attorney General of Utah.

Rev. Que English continues to be a trailblazer for criminal justice reform, education reform, women and girl issues, human trafficking and domestic violence.

Rev. Que is the CEO/Founder and Executive Director of Not on My Watch, Inc. (NOMW) and Chairs the New York City Faith-Based Coalition Against Human Trafficking and Domestic Violence. NOMW has empowered over 300 houses of worship with the tools necessary to combat human trafficking and domestic violence in their communities. They’ve hosted five national conferences where over 3,000 to date have attended spanning from federal personnel, such as Homeland Security representatives, to grassroot organizations educating, empowering and creating advocates around these issues. They have worked together with national and local organizations to see the passing of key legislation to protect the most vulnerable among us.

Rev. Que formed and serves as the Convener of TrafficK-Free NYC (TFNYC). It is the only community led convening that brings together service providers, city agencies, and survivors for the sole purpose of combating human trafficking in New York City. As an educator, Rev. Que launched the first human trafficking course in Hunter’s Silberman School of Social Work and Nyack College.

Chinyere Eyoh is the Founder/CEO of Sexual Offences Awareness & Response Initiative (SOAR), a non-profit she started in 2011 in her home country, Nigeria. The organisation provides prevention and survivor support solutions on child sexual abuse. In collaboration with traditional and community leaders, she leads efforts at SOAR in establishing and strengthening Child Protection Committees which respond to widespread sexual exploitation and abuse of children at grassroots levels. She also establishes safe spaces for adolescent girls in schools and communities to encourage confidential disclosures and build their capacity, including survivors, as peer educators against sexual violence. Just recently she began equally creating safe spaces for boys to address issues of sexual abuse of boys, as well as gender norms and stereotypes which encourage sexual violence against girls by boys and men.

Chinyere is a published author of “When Life Just Isn’t Fair,” a book chronicling her experiences as a survivor of child sexual abuse; “Bimbo’s Pain,” a sexual abuse awareness tool for children; and “Why Can’t I Stop,” which shows the truth about porn and how to break free for young people of faith. She gleans from her experiences as a survivor of sexual violence in passionately serving as a Mentor and Coach to countless teenagers, a role she has worked in for over 18 years.

DC Foster Care & Courtney’s House: A Holistic Approach to Combat Sex Trafficking
Different Perspectives: Exposing the Connections Between All Forms of Sexual Exploitation

Tina Frundt is a leading figure in the crusade to help children sexually exploited for commercial purposes. Ms. Frundt herself is a survivor of domestic sex trafficking. She now dedicates her life to helping women and children heal from domestic sex trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.

Since founding Courtney’s House in August 2008, Tina and her organization have helped more than 500 victims escape from being trafficked and find a new life. She also trains law enforcement and other non-profit groups to help and provide resources to victims. She is a member of both the Washington, D.C. Anti-Trafficking Task Force and the Prince George’s County Human Trafficking Task Force.

Tina has been featured on numerous national television shows and publications, including The Oprah Show, The Montel Williams Show, CNN, and “Redbook Magazine.” In 2010, she was awarded the Frederick Douglass Award. The award is given to an individual who has survived slavery and is using their life in freedom to help others. She has also testified before the U.S. Congress about her own experiences and the need for greater protection and services for trafficked persons.

In December 2015, Tina was named to the United States Advisory Council on Human Trafficking by President Obama.

BEVERLY HALLBERG
President, District Media Group
On-Camera Television Training

Beverly Hallberg has been on all sides of the camera. Producer, director, and host are just a few of the shoes she’s filled. But she found her passion in helping people be their “best self” once the tape starts rolling. Beverly noticed a common trend: during media interviews, people often present their “worst self.” Knowledgeable and engaging people suddenly freeze-up, losing the clarity and impact of their messages.

This observation inspired Beverly to launch District Media Group in 2008 to focus on media training – preparing people to present themselves and their messages with confidence and precision. She has trained members of Congress, organization leaders, and policy experts, among other professionals for appearances on local as well as national networks.

Beverly comments on communication tactics in popular and political culture and has been published in publications such as Newsweek, The Daily Signal, The Federalist, The Washington Examiner and The Hill. She is also a frequent contributor on Fox News and CNN.

Prior to DMG, Beverly served as Director of LI Studios. She has edited, produced, and directed numerous TV and radio shows and anchored a weekend sports program for Salem Radio Network News. Additionally, Beverly has written and produced videos, PSAs, and live programs for government agencies including the Department of Labor, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, among others. Beverly has a B.S. in radio and television broadcasting, and is a native of Hollister, CA.

He is currently appointed as academic advisor to the Intersecretarial Anti-Trafficking Commission in Mexico. He provides training to judges, prosecutors, law enforcement and migratory agents on human trafficking (prevention, victims’ rights, and the enforcement of anti-trafficking laws). He has developed human trafficking awareness campaigns, some aimed at indigenous communities, and coordinated interagency groups to fight human trafficking. He has conducted and elaborated on several studies on human trafficking, including the Report on the Situation of Human Trafficking in Mexico, as well as the Landscape Analysis: Human Trafficking for the Purpose of Labor Exploitation in Mexico. He currently lectures at the Universidad Panamericana’s Law Faculty in Mexico-City.

He advocates for the implementation of the Nordic Model in Mexico, raising awareness about the violence inherent to prostitution, trafficking, and their shared link to pornography. He is a consultant of different NGO’s, including Polaris. He has lectured all across his country, as well as abroad. He holds a degree in Law, a master’s degree in Governance and Public Policy (Mexico) and a Ph.D. in Law (Germany).

Best Practices and Tips for Working with Survivors

Shamere McKenzie is a consultant, an activist, a subject matter expert on human trafficking, and a sought-after, award-winning internationally recognized speaker. Turning her past adversities into an opportunity to liberate and protect others, Shamere has brought about social and political change in America and around the world.

Shamere has a strong passion for education and policy and is the Chief Executive Officer for Sun Gate Foundation, an anti-trafficking organization that provides educational opportunities for survivors of human trafficking. As a former program director, she authored an anti-trafficking program from the ground up and oversaw an emergency residential program for adult survivors of human trafficking. Shamere is also the co-chair for the victim’s services committee of the Maryland State Human Trafficking Task Force.
In 2018 Shamere responded to a call from the Ministry of Justice in her birthplace, Jamaica, and currently serves as the Ambassador for Jamaica in the fight against human trafficking.

Shamere works tirelessly to raise awareness of human trafficking by speaking at universities, conferences, community events, and consulting with government officials around the world. She has trained a variety of professionals on how to identify and respond to victims of human trafficking, including the FBI, Home Land Security, Bureau of Diplomatic Security, churches, hotel and airline staff, to name a few.

VANESSA MCNEAL, MSW
Documentary Filmmaker, National Speaker, McNeal Media

Vanessa McNeal MSW is an award-winning documentary filmmaker, national speaker, and 2x TEDx speaker. Her professional work has been catapulted by her personal experiences surviving sexual violence and trauma. She is the Director of the internationally recognized documentary, “The Voiceless,” which features the stories of male survivors of sexual violence. She won “Best Director” for the documentary at the Newark International Film Festival. Most recently she directed the groundbreaking film, “Gridshock,” a film about sex trafficking in Iowa. The film features trafficking survivors, experts, an FBI victim specialist, a U.S. Attorney, federal and local law enforcement, advocates and a recovery sex addict. The film was made possible after Vanessa raised $45,000 in a 60 day fundraising campaign. Vanessa won the 2017 YWCA “Woman of Tomorrow” award and won the 2018 STATEment maker award in the entrepreneurial spirit category. In January 2019 she received an Outstanding Anti-Trafficking Service Award presented by the Governor of Iowa. Vanessa received her Bachelor’s degree at Iowa State University and her Master’s degree in Social Work at the University of Northern Iowa.

MELISSA MEYER, MA
Director, Out of Darkness, Atlanta Dream Center

Mel is the Director of Out of Darkness, a department of Atlanta Dream Center. Out of Darkness’ goal is to provide holistic, individualized, and trauma-informed care to adult victims and survivors of commercial sexual exploitation through street and strip club outreach, jail mentoring, 24/7 hotline services, safe home services, and long-term placement. Through years of working as a program director for at-risk youth programs and juvenile justice educational programs, Mel became aware of the impact of commercial sexual exploitation in the United States. After completing a Master’s Degree in Nonprofit Administration and developing awareness material with Not For Sale GA, she joined the Out of Darkness team, where she served as the Director of Residential Services for 5 years. In this role, she worked in direct-care services, developed promising practices for crisis care, and directed the crisis safe homes and staff.

As of January 2018, Mel is now the Director of all programming at Out of Darkness. She has served on the GA Statewide Human Trafficking Task Force for 3 years and currently chairs a work group focused on initiatives for adult domestic victims of Commercial Sexual Exploitation.

How to Communicate for Change with Policymakers
Movement Updates: South Africa

Ryan Smit is an attorney at law in South Africa. Since co-founding ‘Cause for Justice’, a human rights and public interest non-profit in 2013, he has been actively litigating and participating in the development of state policy and legislation in relation to the regulation of sexually explicit material. In addition to successfully overturning a decision by the National Broadcasting Authority to open the digital broadcasting space in South Africa to hard-core pornography, after a protracted court battle from 2013 to 2015, Cause for Justice has also been involved in developing state policy and enabling legislation to protect children from exposure to sexually explicit material.

Most recently, Ryan and his team successfully lobbied Parliament to not water down the definition of “obscenity” in South African law, after three years of non-stop advocacy, which concluded in March 2019.

He is currently studying towards a Ph.D., looking at constitutionally acceptable regulation of pornography distribution in South Africa in an era of complete media convergence.

Ryan also heads the development of a new initiative in South Africa, the Centre Against Sexual Exploitation, to address sexual exploitation through prevention and early intervention by way of a three-pronged strategy – “Educate, Empower, Eradicate” – and to serve as a legal, policy, advocacy, academic, and technical hub for the anti-exploitation movement in South Africa.

Ryan and his wife, Elze-Mari, welcomed their first-born daughter into their family in July 2018.
Liza E. Smoker is Managing Director of The John J. Brunetti Human Trafficking Academy at St. Thomas University School of Law. She graduated from Florida State University with degrees in Multinational Business and Real Estate, where she returned to receive her law degree. She was formally educated on human trafficking at St. Thomas University School of Law’s LL.M./J.S.D Program in Intercultural Human Rights.

Prior to joining the Academy, Ms. Smoker spent ten years in the private practice of law. She also worked in the Executive Office of the Governor of Florida, prosecuted crimes as a CLI in the State Attorney’s Office, and served as a White House Legal Intern in the Office of the Counsel to the President of the United States.

In 2017, Ms. Smoker spearheaded over twenty events focused on the harmful effects of pornography and its link to commercial sexual exploitation. She led a grassroots campaign in support of Florida House Resolution 157 on the issue, that passed in 2018 with bipartisan support.

Ms. Smoker is a Presidential Leadership Scholar, Women’s History Month Honoree of the Broward County Commission on the Status of Women, and recipient of the Paul May Professionalism in Practice Award.

Meiko Taylor spent 8 years working in a residential facility with at-risk youth in foster care and on probation. After learning that some of these teens had been sex trafficked, Meiko developed a passion for prevention. A filmmaker by trade, she created a hip-hop film aimed at educating teens on some of the tactics used by sex traffickers to recruit.
Jay Taylor is a social worker dedicated to social justice and equality initiatives. Jay has worked in anti-human trafficking, community health centers, young men’s restorative programs, psychiatric hospitals, university wellness centers, and currently serves as the clinical director of a Master’s of Social Work program. His involvement with men’s issues began when he worked with men in anti-human trafficking and domestic violence programs. Jay’s community involvement led to partnerships with domestic violence shelters, women’s groups, and universities to develop strategies for decreasing the prevalence of domestic violence and sexual assault against all persons. He has also worked with university administration to address cultures of masculinity as an avenue to developing sexual assault prevention programs on campus. Jay teaches and trains with a focus on intersectional equality – addressing how race, gender, ethnicity, sexuality and class play a role in maintaining or preventing violence against others.

Boz Tchividjian founded GRACE in 2004. A former prosecutor, Boz created the first “Sexual Crimes” division at the Office of the State Attorney in the 7th Judicial Circuit of Florida. Later, as the division chief, Boz was personally responsible for prosecuting hundreds of sexual victimization related cases and supervising thousands of such cases. A world-renowned expert on issues related to sexual violence perpetrated against children and adults, Boz has spent over twenty years utilizing what he learned as a prosecutor to train and equip prosecutors, investigators, social workers, and medical personnel in handling various aspects of child sexual abuse prosecutions. Boz has also represented sexual assault plaintiffs in civil cases against perpetrators and institutions.

He is a former columnist for Religion News Service, where he wrote a weekly column that focused on the intersection of abuse and faith communities. His columns can now be found at www.netgrace.org/resources.

Boz is a published author and recently co-authored “The Child Safeguarding Policy Guide for Churches and Ministries” with psychologist and attorney Shira Berkovits. His scholarship focuses on issues related to sexual victimization. His most recent article, entitled, “Catching American Sex Offenders Overseas: A Proposal for a Federal Mandated Reporting Law,” was published in the UMKC Law Review and is the basis for recently drafted federal legislation.

In addition to his duties with GRACE, Boz currently serves as a professor at Liberty University School of Law, where he teaches Child Abuse and the Law, a course which he developed and is designed to prepare students to become child advocates inside and outside of the courtroom.
As Vice President of Policy and Research for the National Center on Sexual Exploitation, Lisa conducts policy analysis and advocacy, advances understanding of pornography’s public health harms, and liaises with public officials, advocates, and academics to advance strategies combating the web of sexual exploitation, including pornography, stripping, prostitution, sexual trafficking, sexual assault, and more.

FILM - Let Me Tell Ya’ll ‘Bout Black Chicks: Violence Against Black Women in Pornography

Armed with my first adult library card, at age 12 I checked out the book “Scream Quietly or the Neighbors Will Hear.” This book was one of the early academic efforts to investigate domestic violence. Today, I spend my professional life writing, training, and consulting. My primary goal is to produce research that can be applied to real life problems. For example, I create culturally sensitive training material for domestic violence/sexual assault advocates.

In 1997, after completing my second post-doctoral fellowship at the University of New Hampshire, the opportunity to help build an institution and a psychology program drew me to UW Tacoma. I teach a range of psychology courses related to violence and sexuality, including Family Violence, Human Sexuality, Sex Crimes and Sexual Violence, and Sexual Deviance.

I study the long-term consequences of intimate partner violence and sexual assault. I also investigate the hypersexualization of young women in the media.
