Thus, it is important to understand what kinds of erotic romance are out there, and why these may appeal to readers.

For readers who like billionaires

The wealthy hero who finds true love with a woman of lower status, whether financial or social, is a staple of both traditional and erotic romance. From dashing dukes to billionaire boyfriends, this character type can be found throughout the literature.

Die-hard fans of the Fifty Shades of Grey Trilogy will appreciate Sylvia Day's Crossfire Novels, starting with Bared to You. Unfolding over multiple novels, Crossfire's moody, dramatic story arc follows the turbulent, often obsessive relationship between Eva Trammel, a young assistant at an advertising agency, and Gideon Cross, the charismatic businessman with whom she becomes involved. Both characters' past traumas threaten to destroy their future happiness unless they can find ways to come to terms with their experiences and find healing and redemption.

Maya Banks' Breathless trilogy (beginning with Rush) follows three wealthy businessmen whose credo is "play hard and live free" — and whose lifelong friendship is tested as each falls in love. Less angst than either Fifty Shades or the Crossfire series, the interlinked but stand-alone novels in this series provide tidier resolutions to conflicts and traditional happily-ever-afters for its heroes and heroines.

Cecilia Tan's Struck by Lightning series, beginning with Slow Surrender, introduces Karina, a graduate student who supports herself by waiting tables at a New York diner. One night, she encounters mystery man James, an attractive, confident, and obviously wealthy young man. James also has a penchant for flirtatious games that — despite the book's title — quickly escalate into an intense, sexually charged affair. Readers who enjoy boundary-pushing sexual encounters without tears or self-flagellating interior monologues will want to read this series, which continues with Slow Seduction and Slow Satisfaction.

For readers interested specifically in BDSM

Beginning with The Siren, Tiffany Reisz's The Original Sinners series follows protagonist Nora Sutherlin as she navigates two overlapping careers: one as a professional Dominatrix, the other as a bestselling writer of erotic fiction. As Nora draws on her life experiences to create her fiction, the novels themselves explore Nora's past, particularly with regard to her relationships with the men in her life: her editor, Zach; her virginal 19-year-old intern, Wesley, her boss, Kingsley, and her once and future lover Soren, a Roman Catholic priest and secret sadist.

Shakir Rashaan's Chronicles of the Nubian Underworld, set in Atlanta's African-American BDSM community, star Lord Ramesses and Lady Nefterteri, self-described "libertines" and partners in both life and business. Taking readers inside the House of Kemet-Ka, the alternating narrators introduce

CANDY LICKER

"I'ma put something in your ass," he said in a low voice. "Put something in there that'll shut you right the fuck up."

I almost screamed again when I saw what he had in his hand.

That crazy motherfucker was holding a gun.

And not one of those regular old Saturday night specials either. I'd seen this kind of gun before, it was Seagram's favorite piece. A .44 caliber Magnum with a hair trigger. The kind of shit you roll with when you wanna blow a niggah's brains out through the back of his head.

Hurricane cursed and slapped the barrel across my mouth, busting open my bottom lip. I swallowed blood and panicked when I saw the crazy look in his eyes. My teeth were clenched but he forced me to open them shits, shoving that barrel halfway down my throat, then taking it out and cracking it first against my collarbone and then dead on the tip of my elbow. I yelped and rolled over, balling up in a knot and cradling the black pain that ran from my shoulder all the way down to my fingertips. Suddenly he was on top of me again, and the cold metal was being pushed between
